Auvers-sur-Oise was at one time or another home to a number of artists: Van Gogh, Pissaro, Cézanne and Daubigny. This village, which has a medieval air to it, still bears the traces of these late nineteenth century Impressionists.

Several walks in the village are signposted, allowing visitors to discover Le Jardin Daubigny painted in July 1890, or L'Eglise d'Auvers, which is on display in the Musée d'Orsay, in Paris.

You can end your visit at the cemetery, where Vincent Van Gogh is buried alongside his brother Théo.
